What Other Therapists Are Saying

"This was by far the best class I have ever attended. The information was presented very well and I feel I will be able to implement this into my practice and provide treatment to those people I used to say I could not help."

2009 OT Attendee

"Great additional information to add from first course."

2009 SLP Attendee

"I have gained confidence with the knowledge I already possess, understand how to look more effectively at how comorbidities impact or even mask cognitive function, and learned some possible strategies to start the 'ripple effect' within my facility to achieve multidisciplinary buy in."

2009 OTA Attendee

Who Should Attend?

This course is for health professionals who have completed an introductory Allen Theory course and who have some experience implementing this model in practice, including:

- Occupational therapists and occupational therapy assistants
- Physical therapists and physical therapy assistants
- Speech language pathologists

Course Description

Dementia Capable Care: Dementia Therapy Intermediate

This course is designed for Occupational Therapists/COTAs, Physical Therapists/PTAs, and Speech Language Pathologists who have some experience using the Allen Cognitive Disabilities Model with the geriatric dementia patient. The training challenges the therapist to achieve greater understanding of the Cognitive Disabilities Model (CDM) developed by Claudia Allen and application of both the CDM and the Theory of Retrogenesis for evaluation, treatment intervention, documentation, and programming. There is a teaching emphasis on assessing, treating, and documenting for patients with comorbidities, with special emphasis on psychiatric comorbidities. This course uses multiple challenging case study lab sessions to build the skill and confidence of the dementia therapist.

What Therapists Will Learn

- Understand how to use the Allen battery to accurately identify a person's Allen Cognitive Level and to apply the Allen level to reimbursable goals and treatment approaches addressing deficits in ADLs, mobility, leisure activity, cognition, communication, and/or swallowing.
- Identify how psychiatric illness impacts function and cognition.
- Establish treatment plans to reduce behavioral outbursts and improve function and safety.
- Understand how to use the Allen battery and clinical reasoning skills to assess and treat persons with dementia who experience psychiatric and other common comorbid conditions.
- Discuss methods to integrate the Allen Cognitive Level assessment and treatment methods into various clinical settings.
- Identify key documentation elements for reimbursement.

Our Esteemed Faculty

Kim Warchol, OTR/L

President of Dementia Care Specialists

Kim graduated from the University of Illinois in 1989 with a B.S. degree in Occupational Therapy. She is an expert in the Allen Cognitive Disabilities theory and is a former member of the Allen Cognitive Network board.

She has authored several dementia care articles, and she lectures nationally on various topics of dementia management and aging. She designed The Forget-Me-Not Care Model® used for LTC dementia programming. Kim sat on the committee that created the Illinois Dementia Care Unit minimum standards of care and was a member of the AOTA Cognitive Disability Expert Panel.

Chris Ebell, OT/L

Chris is the lead DCS trainer and an Allen Authorized Instructor. Chris received her B.A. degree in Psychology from the University of Dayton and her B.S. degree in Occupational Therapy at Chicago State University in 1987. In her many years of experience, she has specialized in geriatrics in various settings including psychiatry, hospital rehab, skilled nursing, and home health.

Caroline Copeland, OTR/L

Caroline is a graduate of the University of Illinois and has been a clinician since 1989. She is an expert in the use of the Allen Cognitive Disabilities Theory and she has extensive experience in the areas of psychiatry, rehab, home health, and skilled nursing. As an educator, she has been a guest lecturer at various universities in the use of the Allen theory and treatment in both the mental health and physical disability settings. She currently practices as a clinical specialist in senior living communities.
